On the eve of its 50th anniversary, the Landscape Architecture Foundation asked a powerhouse of leading thinkers in landscape architecture to reflect on the last half-century and present bold ideas for what the discipline should achieve in the future. These designers discussed their role in addressing weighty issues like climate change, urbanization and management of vital resources like water and global inequities. Their ideas were used to craft the New Landscape Declaration, a manifesto for landscape architecture in the 21st century.

Join ASLA San Diego and LAF for the annual kick off bash, film screening, and panel discussion where LAF will present highlights from this landmark event and lead a discussion on the 21st century call to action to help solve the defining issues of our time. Drinks and appetizers will served.
